

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods are provided for remotely generating an instrument.

A request for the instrument is received from a customer, the instrument is 5 generated in electronic form and a first security image in electronic form is added to the electronic form of the instrument to create a composite image. The composite image in electronic form is transmitted to the customer for printing by the customer.